

How to start a poultry farm with little or no money

Globally poultry farming is a profitable and rich protein source, however before starting it is important to obtain information, copy successful poultry farmers and start small with day old chicks.

Additionally, identify the type of birds needed and follow operational procedures such as provision of quality feeds to birds, understand the business first as this gives more experience and exposure to profit maximization and loss minimization.

Beginner steps

Start by requesting for a loan since poultry farming requires investment at the start.

Additionally, obtain chicks from reputable suppliers however, always start with small number of birds that will cost less money.

Furthermore, identify the type of birds to keep either broilers or layers and after rearing sale your poultry products or stocks to generate money.

Always ensure selection of good farm site to ease transportation and to avoid complaints from local communities.

Also construct a good chicken house depending on type of birds as intensive houses are good for commercial producers.

Additionally, buy proper poultry equipments to ease feeding and drinking. Always avoid hiring many workers as this requires more money.

Prepare the brooder before chicks arrive and ensure proper health management by vaccinating, providing healthy food and fresh water.

Lastly, use proper marketing techniques like survey to facilitate selling of poultry products for income generation.